Dear Jollyites,

“You must find the place inside yourself where nothing is Impossible”

The last few months at Jolly were full of activities, action and development. We congratulate the newly elected Trustees and are thankful to all the managing committee members, office bearers, election committee co-ordinators and respected members for their courtesy and co-operation for the smooth and harmonious completion of the election. On the developmental side, newly renovated Table Tennis Room, Carrom Room, Cricket Pavilion and Multi Turf Entry passage were opened for use for all Members. We are also planning renovation in the Fast Food Area and Swimming Pool Area and the work is in progress.

We saw a lot of informative Seminars on varied subjects like Equity Markets, Wealth Management, Changes in Criminal Laws, Matrimonial Disputes and Divorce Related Issues. For the very first time at Ghatkopar Jolly Gymkhana we had organized Maharashtra State Ranking Carrom Tournament under the Aegis of Maharashtra Carrom Association. We also saw Tennis Cricket Tournament, Inter School Cricket Tournament, Mega Suryanamaskar Event, Annual Prize Distribution Ceremony with Live Performance of Karaoke by members, Annual Volleyball Tournament and Ladies Cricket Tournament and we are proud to announce that Ghatkopar Jolly Gymkhana ladies Cricket Team won the Mumbai Level Ladies Cricket Tournament.

Ghatkopar Jolly Gymkhana members members were enthralled and entertained fully by participating in Dandiya Raas on the beats of Avishkar, Ladies Raas Garba, Akhil Bharatiya Virat Hasya Kavi Sammelan, Diwali Carnival, Christmas Carnival, Sports day Event for Ladies and Children and Gujrati Geeto no Guldasto Ranglo. Our Jolly was beautifully decorated on the occasion of Shri Ram Pran Pratistha which was well appreciated by all members. Also our members joined in large numbers for the unfurling of our National Flag on 75th Republic Day alongwith peppy patriotic dance and songs.

EDITORIAL

Dear Jollyites,

"Life is a big canvas, paint it in bright colours"

At Jolly Gymkhana, life is vibrant full of colour, vigour and entertainment. In line with this thought, we bring to you another colourful issue of our bulletin to celebrate life. 2024 has begun with a lot of promise for us and the same can be seen in the current issue.

The last few months have been very eventful and colourful at Jolly Gymkhana. 2024 was brought in by celebrating the consecration at the newly built Ram Mandir in Ayodhya. The lovely decor and rangoli to celebrate the event at the club graces our cover page. The issue covers many other positive beginnings like the inauguration of the renovated Table tennis room, Carrom room and the Cricket Pavilion. Keeping the sportsman spirit intact, this issue also brings forth the overview of opening of the cricket ground on Dusshera and the Mega Surya Namaskar Event held in December

Every festival is celebrated with heart and soul here, as we see the beautifully captured pictorial highlights of the Navratri festival, Diwali celebrations, Gujarati Songs programme and the Christmas Carnival.

Our aim is to bring forth to every member the wonderful events and their pictorial presentations to motivate each one of you to participate in large numbers. We hope you celebrate the colours of life through this bulletin issue.

Happy reading,

Yashasvi Jaiswal` s success story is a testament to his extraordinary journey from living in a tent to becoming a cricket sensation, showcasing resilience, talent, and determination.

Yashasvi Jaiswal's narrative is an inspiring testament to unwavering determination and a burning passion for success. Born on December 28, 2001, in Bhadohi, Uttar Pradesh, Yashasvi embarked on a challenging journey to realize his dream of becoming a cricketer.

Leaving his hometown at a tender age, he ventured to Mumbai with the singular goal of forging a career in cricket. Yet, his path was fraught with financial hardships, compelling him to resort to selling street food to make ends meet. Beyond manning a pani puri stall, Yashasvi also toiled at a dairy shop to earn his livelihood. Having been homeless, the young lad found refuge in the tents at Azad Maidan

Yashasvi's prowess did not go unnoticed, leading to his selection for various local teams and cricket clubs in Mumbai. His breakthrough moment arrived when he became the youngest cricketer to achieve a double century in List A cricket history at the age of 17 years and 292 days.

In 2020, Yashasvi represented the Indian U-19 cricket team in the ICC U-19 Cricket World Cup. His exceptional performance in the tournament, where he emerged as the leading run-scorer with 400 runs in six matches, contributed significantly to India lifting the trophy. Consequently, he earned the prestigious "Player of the Tournament" title.

His stellar showing in the U-19 World Cup paved the way for an Indian Premier League (IPL) contract. During the 2020 IPL auction, Yashasvi was selected by the Rajasthan Royals. In a brief period, he solidified his position as a dependable batsman in the tournament, boasting an average of 32.56 in 37 matches. In IPL 2023, he emerged as the highest run-scorer for the Royals and was subsequently rewarded with an opportunity to represent India. Making an impact, he notched a splendid century on his Test debut and showed that his hard work paid off.

HEALTHCARE

Transforming Healthcare - The rise of Artificial intelligence

AI in healthcare is getting more sophisticated and efficient at supporting doctors and other medical professionals. Not only does this provide a real opportunity for growth within the profession, but it also means that tasks can be completed more quickly and at a lower cost.

The potential for AI in healthcare is huge, as it has the ability to apply problem-solving techniques that humans could not do alone. With no signs of slowing down, the growth of AI in healthcare is a trend worth recognising and familiarising yourself with.

We'll explore how AI affects healthcare, the pros and cons, and current applications. We'll also take a look at what the future may hold for artificial intelligence in healthcare.

How does AI affect medicine and healthcare?

The impact of AI in medicine and healthcare has been enormous and continues to grow exponentially. Put simply, AI describes computers and similar machines that replicate human cognition and are therefore able to learn, think (in a sense), and make decisions on our behalf.

When you apply this to healthcare, some of the outcomes include:

- Machine learning is used to analyse medical data and reveal insights. These insights are then used to improve patient experiences and health outcomes.
- AI supports medical professionals, both in conducting research and in clinical settings. For example, AI may help medical professionals make key decisions about medications and treatments by accessing research relevant to the procedure and the patient's needs.
- Medical imaging, where scans and X-rays are analysed in order to eliminate the risk of human error.
- AI makes healthcare more predictive and proactive by analysing data to improve preventive care recommendations.

AI and healthcare: How things look currently

In many cases, the role of AI in healthcare is still at a fairly embryonic stage. Therefore, research and results from its use are still being gathered and analysed in order to make improvements and revolutionise the way healthcare is distributed in the UK and around the world.

However, at this stage, it's clear to see the huge amount of opportunity that's available to the profession by embracing AI. Researchers, clinicians, and patients are already reaping the benefits of its introduction, which will inevitably lead to a rapid roll-out of new technologies in the near future.

If the current growing trend of AI use in healthcare continues, it's clear that it will become a core part of future digital health systems, helping to revolutionise medicine and healthcare to the benefit of anyone that interacts with it.

This matters because good healthcare is at the heart of a thriving society, so having the ability to analyse data in a more efficient and productive way is hugely important.

It could easily be the difference between life and death, enhancing patient care and improving the overall quality of life for the human race.

Advantages of AI in healthcare

- 1. Ability to analyse data and improve diagnosis: When it comes to medical records and other healthcare-related data, AI technology is able to analyse it much faster than humans are able to, and often more accurately.
- 2. Better patient care: It achieves this by cutting down on research time, facilitating the better use of resources, reducing errors and help in making important decision about treatments.
- 3. Reduced cost of care: There are plenty of ways AI can reduce costs, both financially and time-wise.
- 4. Real-time, accurate data : Real-time data reduces costs, minimises waiting times, and offers a greater chance of being able to prevent a condition from worsening.

5. Improved workload and reduced staff stress: Artificial intelligence in healthcare could help to address this issue, taking on some of the workloads to help ease the burden.

6. Health monitoring and digital consultations: Whether it's wearable technologies that help monitor a patient's health or digital consultations that can be done on a smart device, AI is a great way of improving the way medical professionals record and analyse data. It also allows patients to monitor their own health and receive expert assistance online.

Applications of AI in healthcare

There are plenty of instances where artificial intelligence is already being used in healthcare successfully, as well as countless opportunities for its involvement in the future. Here, we will take a look at some of the ways in which AI could have a positive impact on the profession.

Illness detection and diagnosis: Machine learning in healthcare could be used to detect more complex conditions that aren't immediately apparent when someone receives a diagnosis. The AI technology would then be able to collect vital data and alert medical professionals.

Medical imaging: AI is already being used in medical imaging, following research that suggested AI could be as effective at detecting diseases, such as cancer, as human radiologists. Not only is this vital for early prevention but also means that medical images can be examined a lot more quickly and thoroughly with the help of AI – eliminating the risk of human error.

Drug creation and development: AI in medicine can be used to create new drugs by analysing data and already existing medicines. Discovering and developing medicine is incredibly costly and time-consuming. With the help of AI, costs could be reduced and promising new drugs could be found much faster.

Managing medical records: Helps medical professionals to work a lot more effectively, but it also means they can work faster and prioritise other important aspects of their job.

Monitoring health using wearables and personal devices: Wearables are already being used in healthcare to monitor patients and smart devices to conduct digital consultations.

The use of these technologies is only likely to increase, allowing medical professionals to intervene at the first sign of problems and ensure patients receive treatment and care as soon as possible.

What is the future of healthcare?

Despite there being both positives and negatives associated with artificial intelligence in healthcare, it's clear that in the main it's seen as a force for good and will continue to be developed and used more widely moving forward.

In fact, it already plays a pivotal role in understanding the needs of patients through in-depth data analysis. Medical professionals are likely to rely on it even more for guidance and support, using it effectively to provide accurate and timely treatment to patients.

Ultimately, the role of AI in medicine is to eliminate human error, make the lives of hard-working medical professionals easier, and improve the way care is delivered.

Whether you work in the medical profession or find yourself requiring treatment in the future, it's likely that seeing AI technology used within a healthcare environment will become very normal.
